Donald Trump said he wanted to be a cheerleader for the country. We didn't need a cheerleader. We needed a president.

Donald Trump is not responsible for COVID-19, but he is responsible for his failed response and for lying to the American people.

Joe Biden @JoeBiden
At this moment, we're facing both the worst public health crisis of our lifetime and the existential threat of climate change.
We need a president who believes in science.

The fact of the matter is Donald Trump doesn't have a health care plan.
I do — and you can read it here: [JoeBiden.com/HealthCare](https://www.joe Biden.com/HealthCare)

Donald Trump knew that COVID-19 was dangerous. He knew it was deadly. And he purposely downplayed it.
Now, nearly 200,000 Americans are dead.
It's unconscionable.

For months, President Trump has failed to provide desperately needed fiscal relief to our state and local governments — and we're seeing the consequences every day.
Our students and educators deserve better.
As president, I'll make sure they always have the resources they need.

Joe Biden @JoeBiden
The fact is, Iran is closer to a nuclear bomb today than it was when Donald Trump took office.
Every day he's in charge of our national security is another day our enemies are emboldened and the American people are at risk.

Joe Biden @JoeBiden
Donald Trump said he didn't want to tell the truth and create a panic. So he did nothing and created a disaster.

Donald Trump's climate denial may not have directly caused the record fires we're seeing on the West Coast. But if he gets four more years in the White House, they'll only become more common, devastating, and deadly.

Joe Biden @JoeBiden
In the middle of a global pandemic, President Trump is trying to get the U.S. Supreme Court to eliminate Obamacare and rip health care protections away from 100 million Americans with pre-existing conditions.
Don't forget that.
